Chapter 1 Multimodal Transport Contract

Part 1
General Provisions

Section 7. A multimodal transport contract is the contract whereby the consignor agrees to have the multimodal transport operator perform or procure the performance of the multimodal transport and the consignor agrees to pay freight to him.

Section 8. Any stipulation in a multimodal transport contract which has the purpose or which results, whether directly or implicitly, in exonerating the duty or liability of the multimodal transport operator or which is prejudicial to the right of the consignor or consignee under the provisions of this Act shall be void.

The void stipulation under paragraph one shall not affect the validity of other stipulations in the contract and it shall be deemed the intention of the parties to separate the said other stipulations from the void stipulation under paragraph one.

The provisions in this Section do not deprive the parties of the right to enter an agreement imposing duty and liability of the multimodal transport operator greater than those provided in this Chapter.

Section 9. The provisions in this Chapter shall not affect the right and duty pertaining to general average adjustment as stipulated in the contract of multimodal transport or the law concerning such matter.

Section 10. In executing a multimodal transport contract, the multimodal transport operator shall issue a multimodal transport bill of lading to the consignor when the goods are taken in his charge.

A multimodal transport bill of lading may be negotiable or non-negotiable depending on the option of the consignor.

A multimodal transport bill of lading shall be signed by the multimodal transport operator or person authorized by him.

The signature under paragraph three shall include signature appearing in facsimile, perforation, stamp, symbol, or signature made by mechanical or electronic means or by any other means in accordance with the provisions of the law concerned.

Section 11. A multimodal transport bill of lading shall contain the following particulars:

- (1) The general nature of the goods, the marks necessary for the identification of the goods, statement informing the dangerous nature , perishable nature of the goods, if required , and the quantity of shipping unit , gross weight of the goods or their quantity otherwise as notified or furnished by the consignor ;
- (2) The apparent condition of the goods ;
- (3) The name and principal place of business of the multimodal transport operator ;
- (4) The name of the consignor ;
- (5) The name of consignee, if named by the consignor;
- (6) The place and date of taking in charge of the goods by the multimodal transport operator ;
- (7) The place of delivery of the goods ;
- (8) The date or period of delivery of the goods at the place of delivery, if expressly agreed upon between the parties ;
- (9) A statement indicating whether the multimodal transport bill of lading is negotiable or non-negotiable ;

- (10) The place and date of issue of the multimodal transport bill of lading ;
- (11) The signature of the multimodal transport operator or person authorized by him ;
- (12) The freight to the extent payable by the consignee which includes the currency payable or freight for each mode of transport or statement indicating that freight is payable by the consignee as agreed by the parties ;
- (13) The intended route of transport, modes of transport and places of transshipment if known at the time the multimodal transport bill of lading is issued ;
- (14) Any other particulars which the parties may agree to insert in the multimodal transport bill of lading.

Any multimodal transport bill of lading issued by the multimodal transport operator which does not contain all the particulars specified in paragraph one of this Section still has legal status as a multimodal transport bill of lading if it meets the character of the multimodal transport bill of lading as provided in Section 4.

Section 12. Where a multimodal transport bill of lading does not contain any reservation expressing the inaccuracy of any particulars, grounds of suspicion or circumstances in which the accuracy cannot be ascertained, as the case may be, or the multimodal transport bill of lading does not expressly contain the statement such as “shipper’s weight, load and count”, “shipper-packed container” or a similar expression, it shall be prima facie evidence that the goods have been taken in charge by the multimodal transport operator in the condition described in the multimodal transport bill of lading.

Section 13. If no reservation under Section 12 has been inserted in the multimodal transport bill of lading and if the said multimodal transport bill of lading or electronic data of the multimodal transport bill of lading has been transferred or transmitted to the consignee or third party who in good faith has acknowledged and relied on the information of the said multimodal transport bill of lading, proof to the contrary is not admissible.

Section 14. Where a multimodal transport bill of lading has been issued, the relationship between the multimodal transport operator and the consignee in all matters relating to carriage of goods as described in the multimodal transport bill of lading shall be governed by the terms of the multimodal transport bill of lading.

Section 15. All provisions in respect of a bill of lading in the law concerning Carriage of Goods by Sea shall apply mutatis mutandis to the multimodal transport bill of lading.

Part 2 Duty and Liability of the Consignor

Section 16. When the goods are taken in charge by the multimodal transport operator from the consignor or other person acting on behalf of the consignor, the consignor shall be deemed to have guaranteed to the multimodal transport operator the accuracy of all particulars relating to the general nature of the goods, their marks, numbers, weight, volume, quantity and the dangerous character of the goods as notified or furnished by him for insertion in the multimodal transport bill of lading.

If there is any damage resulting from inaccuracy of the particulars referred to in paragraph one notified or furnished by the consignor to the multimodal transport operator for insertion in the multimodal transport bill of lading, notwithstanding that he has transferred the multimodal transport bill of lading to a third party, the consignor shall be liable to compensate the multimodal transport operator. However, the multimodal transport operator shall remain liable to the third person under the multimodal transport contract.

Section 17. The consignor shall mark or label dangerous goods in accordance with international conventions or any relevant legislation or regulations.

Section 18. When the consignor hands over dangerous goods to the multimodal transport operator or any person acting on his behalf, the consignor shall inform him of the dangerous character of the goods and the precautions to be taken, if any. If the consignor fails to do so and the multimodal transport operator does not otherwise have knowledge of the same, the right and duty of the consignor and the multimodal transport operator shall be as follows:

- (1) The consignor shall be liable to the multimodal transport operator for all losses or expenses incurred or resulting from the shipment of such goods;
- (2) The multimodal transport operator or any person acting on his behalf may at any time unload the goods from the transport vehicle, destroy or render such goods innocuous, as the circumstances may require, without payment of compensation.

The provisions of paragraph one shall not apply to any person with knowledge of the dangerous character of the goods carried at the time he has taken such goods in his charge.

Section 19. Even where the consignor has complied with Section 18, if it later appears that the goods are dangerous or become an actual danger to life or property or will clearly become dangerous, the multimodal transport operator or any person acting on his behalf may unload, destroy, or render such goods innocuous, as the circumstances may require, without payment of compensation, but the multimodal transport operator is still liable for general average on his part or where he is liable under Section 20.

Part 3

Duty and Liability of the Multimodal Transport Operator

Section 20. Subject to Section 27, the multimodal transport operator shall be liable for loss resulting from loss of, damage to, or delay in delivery of the goods if the cause of such loss, damage or delay in delivery has occurred from the time the multimodal transport operator has taken the goods in charge to the time of delivery of the goods, unless the multimodal transport operator proves that he, his servants or agents or any other person whose services he makes use for the performance of the multimodal transport contract have taken all measures that could reasonably be required to avoid the occurrence of such loss, damage or delay in delivery including the consequences thereof.

The multimodal transport operator shall not be liable for any loss resulting from delay in delivery unless the consignor has notified the multimodal transport operator before the goods are taken in his charge that in case of delay in delivery, the multimodal transport operator shall be held liable for the loss which may occur and the multimodal transport operator has, before the goods are taken in his charge, agreed to be liable for such loss.

Section 21. Delay in delivery occurs :

- (1) when the multimodal transport operator does not deliver the goods within the time expressly agreed upon ;
- (2) when, in the absence of such agreement, the multimodal transport operator has not delivered the goods within the time which it would be reasonably required of him, having regard to the circumstances of the case.

Section 22. The multimodal transport operator shall undertake to deliver goods as follows:

- (1) If the multimodal transport bill of lading is issued in negotiable form made out to bearer, the multimodal transport operator shall deliver the goods to the person who surrenders any one of the original multimodal transport bills of lading to him.
- (2) If the multimodal transport bill of lading is issued in negotiable form made out to order, the multimodal transport operator shall deliver the goods to the person who surrenders any one of the duly endorsed original multimodal transport bills of lading to him.
- (3) If the multimodal transport bill of lading is issued in negotiable form made out to a named person, the multimodal transport operator shall deliver the goods to the person named in the multimodal transport bill of lading upon proof of his identity and any one of the original multimodal transport bills of lading has been surrendered to him by the said person. But if the multimodal transport bill of lading has been transferred in the form of to order multimodal transport bill of lading or by way of blank endorsement, the provisions of (2) shall apply.
- (4) If the multimodal transport bill of lading is issued in non-negotiable form, the multimodal transport operator shall deliver the goods to the person whose name appears in the multimodal transport bill of lading as the consignee upon proof of his identity.

Where there is no document issued to the consignor, the multimodal transport operator shall deliver the goods to the person as instructed by the consignor or by a person who has acquired the consignor's or the consignee's rights under the multimodal transport contract.

Section 23. Where the consignee cannot be found, or the consignee refuses to receive the goods, the multimodal transport operator shall immediately notify the consignor and ask for his instruction.

If there are circumstances preventing the multimodal transport operator from immediately notifying the consignor, or from obtaining an instruction from the consignor or the consignor fails to send the instruction within reasonable time, or the sent instruction is impracticable, if the goods have been released from the custody of the customs under the customs law, the multimodal transport operator shall be entitled to sell, destroy or otherwise dispose of them as appropriate and necessary.

When the goods have been disposed of under paragraph two, the multimodal transport operator shall notify the consignor without delay unless he is unable to do so. If the multimodal transport operator fails to notify the consignor, the multimodal transport operator shall be liable for the loss incurred.

Where the goods have been disposed of under paragraph two, the multimodal transport operator shall be entitled to deduct the proceeds for freight, accessories of freight and expenditure incurred from such disposal. If there is a surplus, such surplus shall be delivered without delay to the person who is entitled to it. If the surplus cannot be delivered, it shall be deposited with the Depositary Office, but the consignor shall be liable for the deficit in the event of a shortfall.

Where the goods have been disposed of under paragraph two without proceeds derived, the multimodal transport operator shall be entitled to claim against the consignor for the expenditure incurred from the disposal.

Section 24. If it appears at the time the consignee has received the goods that the goods are partially lost or damaged and if the consignee has not made any protest in writing to the multimodal transport operator against the loss or the damage of the goods received, it shall be presumed that the multimodal transport operator has delivered the goods in accordance with the particulars specified in the multimodal transport bill of lading.

Where loss or damage is not apparent, the consignee shall be entitled to protest in writing within six days from the date of receipt of the goods.

Section 25. The multimodal transport operator shall be liable for damage resulting from the acts or omissions of his servants or agents or any other person of whose services he makes use for the performance of the contract, including the acts of such other person's servants and agents performed within the scope of his employment or authority as agents or within the scope of business for which he makes use of the services.

Section 26. Where the goods have not been delivered within the time agreed or the time within which delivery should have been made, as the circumstances may be, the person having the right to receive the goods shall be entitled to any one of the following rights :

- (1) to receive the goods;
  - (2) to receive the goods and claim for damages resulting from delay in delivery ;
- or

- (3) not to receive the goods and claim for damages resulting from delay in delivery.

Where the agreed time of delivery or the reasonable time of delivery has passed not less than ninety days following the due date of delivery, it shall be deemed that the goods are totally lost. The person having the right to receive the goods shall be entitled to compensation as if the goods were totally lost unless there is evidence indicating that such goods have not been lost.

Where the multimodal transport operator has paid compensation or made indemnity to the person having the right to receive the goods, the provisions concerning subrogation in the Civil and Commercial Code shall apply.

Section 27. The multimodal transport operator shall not be liable for loss, damage or delay in delivery if he proves that such loss, damage and delay in delivery arose or resulted from :

- (1) Force Majeure;
- (2) Willful act or negligence of the consignor, the consignee, his representative or agent ;
- (3) Insufficient or defective packaging, marking or numbering of the goods;
- (4) Handling, loading, unloading, stowage of goods by the consignor, the consignee or his representative or agent ;
- (5) Inherent nature or latent defect of the goods;
- (6) Strike, lock-out, work stoppage or labour problems or restraints ;
- (7) In the case of goods carried by sea or internal waters, when such loss, damage or delay in delivery during the carriage has been caused by :
  - (a) willful act or negligence or error in navigation or in management of ship whether committed by the master, mariner, pilot or the carrier's servants;
  - (b) fire unless the fire is caused by the fault or within the privity of the carrier.

However, the multimodal transport operator shall remain liable for loss, damage or delay in delivery under (7) as a result of unseaworthiness of the ship unless the multimodal transport operator can prove that at the beginning of the voyage, he has taken all measures that were required of him in order to keep the ship in seaworthy condition.

Part 4

Limitation of Liability of the Multimodal Transport Operator and Assessment of Compensation

-----

Section 28. Subject to the provisions of Section 30, Section 31 and Section 32, where the goods taken in charge by the multimodal transport operator have been lost or damaged, whether totally or partially, the liability of the multimodal transport operator shall be limited to Six Hundred Sixty Six Point Six Seven (666.67) Special Drawing Right per one shipping unit, or Two (2.00) Special Drawing Right per kilogram of gross weight of the goods lost or damaged, whichever is the higher.

Where the compensation has been calculated under Section 34 and it appears that the value of the goods is lower than the amount of limitation under paragraph one, the value so calculated shall apply.

Where the multimodal transport operator is liable for loss resulting from delay in delivery, or consequential loss under extraordinary circumstances other than loss of or damage to the goods carried, the total liability of the multimodal transport operator shall be limited to an amount not exceeding the freight under the multimodal transport contract.

Where the multimodal transport operator is liable under paragraphs one and three, the aggregate liability of the multimodal transport operator shall be limited to the amount provided in paragraph one.

Section 29. Where the number of shipping unit is specified in the multimodal transport bill of lading, it shall be deemed that the goods under such multimodal transport bill of lading are of the same quantity of the shipping unit specified therein. But where the goods packed in sack, piece, drum, container, roll, crate, bale, bundle, package, case or other unit named otherwise, are stuffed together in one article of transport without specifying the number of shipping unit, all goods in such article of transport are deemed one shipping unit.

Where the article of transport has been lost or damaged, that article of transport, if not owned or otherwise supplied by the carrier, is considered one separate shipping unit.

Section 30. Where the contract of multimodal transport does not include carriage of goods by sea or internal waters, the liability of the multimodal transport operator shall be limited to Eight Point Three Three (8.33) Special Drawing Right per kilogram of gross weight of the goods lost or damaged.

Section 31. Where it is apparent that goods have been lost or damaged during one particular stage of multimodal transport for which the national law of the country where the said goods have been lost or damaged or an international convention would have provided another limit of the carrier's liability, then the limit of the multimodal transport operator's liability for such loss or damage shall be in accordance with the said national law or international convention.

Section 32. The limitation of liability to the multimodal transport operator shall not apply in the following cases :

- (1) The consignor has declared to the multimodal transport operator the condition and value of the goods before they are taken in charge by the multimodal transport operator and such condition and value of the goods have been inserted in the multimodal transport bill of lading.
- (2) The loss, damage or delay in delivery occurred are the result of an act or omission of the multimodal transport operator or his servants or agents or other person whose services the multimodal transport operator makes use for the performance of the contract, with the intent to cause such loss, damage or delay in delivery or recklessly and with the knowledge that such loss, damage or delay would probably result.

Section 33. Subject to Section 32, where there are claims made against the multimodal transport operator and his servants, agents and other person whose services the multimodal transport operator makes use for the performance of the contract, their aggregate liability shall not exceed the amount provided in Section 28, Section 30 or Section 31, as the case may be.

Section 34. Where the goods are lost or damaged, compensation shall be calculated on the basis of the value of the goods at the time and place of delivery to the consignee or at the time and place where delivery of goods should be made to the consignee according to the multimodal transport contract.

The value of the goods under paragraph one shall be calculated in accordance with the current commodity exchange price or if there be no such price, according to the current market price. If there is neither the commodity exchange price nor the current market price, it shall be calculated on the basis of the normal value of the goods of the same kind and quality.

Where the value of the goods calculated under paragraph two is lower than the value specified in the multimodal transport bill of lading, the multimodal transport operator shall be liable for the value so calculated, but if the calculated value is higher, the multimodal transport operator shall be liable only for the value specified in the multimodal transport bill of lading.

Section 35. For the purpose of calculation of liability under this Act, the conversion of the Special Drawing Right to the Thai Baht shall be calculated according to the exchange rate prevailing at the time of calculation of compensation under Section 34 as announced by the Bank of Thailand.

Section 36. The parties to the multimodal transport contract may agree to fix a higher amount of limitation of liability of the multimodal transport operator than that provided in this Part.

Part 5 Claims

Section 37. The provisions in this Chapter shall apply to the claim against the multimodal transport operator whether on ground of the multimodal transport contract or tort and shall apply to claim against his servants, agents or any other person whose services the multimodal transport operator makes use for the performance of the contract.

Section 38. Any claim arising from the multimodal transport, whether on ground of the multimodal transport contract or tort, is barred by prescription if no action or arbitration proceedings have been brought or instituted for decision under the provisions in Chapter 3 within nine months from the day on which the multimodal transport operator delivered, or should have delivered the goods.

Within the prescription under paragraph one, if the person against whom a claim is made has given his written consent bearing his signature to the effect that no prescription shall be invoked in the case where an action is brought to the court or the dispute is referred to the arbitration, such consent is enforceable, but shall not exceed two years from the day on which the multimodal transport operator delivered, or should have delivered the goods.

In case the person against whom a claim is made agrees, by giving a written consent bearing his signature, to extend the prescription, it shall be deemed a consent not to invoke the prescription and such consent shall have the same effect as in the case of paragraph two.
